A young child's emotions

Young children express their emotions much more openly than most adults. In the playground, they often (1) ..... neglect and ridicule the 'weaker' children and 'social misfits'. When they're successful at something, they (2) ..... grimace openly. When they're taking horrible medicine, they (3) ..... conduct in a way that adults rarely do. When they're (4) ..... impatient, you know about it immediately. The (5) ..... gloat a young child can experience during a nightmare often seems far more extreme than the fear adults have. Children's emotions are often very unpredictable too. When something angers them, they (6) ..... mock instantly. A young child can go from peaceful (7) ..... terror to extreme anger and back again in just a couple of minutes. If you give a small child a pet, they'll love it for a day or two, but then they might completely (8) ..... snap it. All of this is for many reasons. Firstly, humans have to learn how to (9) ..... contentment and control their emotions. And that takes time. Secondly, humans have to learn how to (10) ..... handle themselves within a society. That also takes many years. Indeed, many adults still have a lot to learn when it comes to that.

All possible treatments known to science are (2) ..... . There's no cure, and no hope. The patient's death from this disease at some point in the future is (3) ..... . Most of us would say that, as long as the patient is fairly comfortable and pain-free, there's no moral issue. But what if the patient is in extreme agony? They cannot live (4) ..... of machines and 24-hour care. What if the patient (5) ..... and continually asks for their life to be brought to an end by doctors? Should the doctors refuse? At present, in most countries, there are laws against voluntary euthanasia. But from a moral point of view, we have to (6) ..... that there is a problem. Do the doctors really have the right to be (7) ..... to the patient's wishes? On the other hand, opponents of voluntary euthanasia argue that scientific (8) ..... is increasing all the time. An incurable disease one day may be curable the next. They also argue that if the law was changed, the (9) ..... situation would put doctors in a much worse position. They currently have no choice. Do we as a society have the right to expect doctors to (10) ..... such a difficult and complex issue?
